

The Office Copier and Fax Machine Business

Contributed by Steve Staller
Tuesday, 23 October 2007

The office copier and fax machine business is quickly becoming a thing of the past. Today's office copier just doesn't copy, it also sends Email, Stores Documents into your computer, scans, copies, prints and faxes, all from the same unit. My job at Docutek for the past few years has been to bring experts into the Docutek family, and merge our new technologies together to help businesses become more productive, which in turn saves time and money that end up on your bottom line. At Docutek we have become the complete source for all of your office imaging requirements, from the hardware to the software to the computers and servers that run your business. The world's leading manufacturers have put their faith in Docutek as the company best equipped to install these new technologies. Color is becoming the fastest growth area, and, by the end of 2008, 75% of the new equipment purchased by businesses will be able to produce documents in color.

You have my word, that we will stay on top of our industry with the Best products and Best Support available. Our customers are the reason for our existence and without you, we are nothing. You can be assured that I will do whatever it takes to keep you 100% satisfied. To show our appreciation, I will give our valued customers a free software package valued at $1700. You will no longer have to read meters, order supplies or call for service, as most of it will be done for you automatically. Thanks for helping us grow, and check out all the things on our new website and see the awards we have worked so hard to achieve.